How to B-U-I-L-D a Better Reader

B e positive	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Be a positive "coach" when working with your child. A child learns best from a coach who is supportive and uncritical. Your child needs to hear you say, "You can do it!" Always set your child up for success to build self-efficacy (personal belief that he or she is capable). This I-can attitude means your child is less likely to quit, even when learning proves difficult.
U nplug the television	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Unplug the TV, the time is better spent reading When your child does watch TV, turn on the closed caption option to develop concept of word/word identification. Encourage the viewing of quality educational programming to build knowledge base and vocabulary, both necessary for good comprehension
I ncrease time spent reading	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Studies show the average child spends only 5 minutes a day reading outside of school hours. That is not enough! The single most important activity related to eventual success in reading is time spent reading- practice, practice, practice! Can you dedicate at least 20 minutes per day to guide your child's reading practice? That time adds up to over 100 hours a year, 100+ hours of practice with your one-on-one help will make a big difference in your child's reading ability.
L earn new ways to give your child practice at home	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Keep up the good things you are already doing to help your child in school such as helping with homework and reading books together daily! We are here to meet your request to learn even more ways you can help your child. During this workshop you will learn ten simple yet effective strategies for helping your child practice reading at home. Enjoy learning a poem with your child by Shel Silverstein called "Boa Constrictor" (from the book Where the Sidewalk Ends).
D ecide to be a partner with your child's school	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The school has a role to play and so you do. The school provides initial instruction. Your part is to give your child opportunities to practice what is learned in school at home. What does it take to become a good reader? Practice, practice, practice. Your decision to make your child's education a priority makes a big difference. There is a strong correlation between parent involvement and academic performance. Thank you for demonstrating your commitment to taking an active role in your child's education by attending this workshop!
